Jaeger Tract Plans Reviewed; Council Seeks Park Acquisition

by Elaine Skolnik

As evidenced in a December 13 worksession, the Greenbelt City Council and the Westchester Park Civic Association (WPCA) have not given up hope that a 17.4 acre remaining undeveloped parcel of the Jaeger tract will become part of Greenbelt Park. They take this position even though a preliminary plan of subdivision for the property has been filed with the Maryland-National Capital Park and Planning Commission (MNCPPC). The federal park is located within Greenbelt's city limits, the Jaeger tract is adjacent on the east side of Kenilworth Avenue and south of Westchester Drive, in the unincorporated Westchester community. Westchester Park originally was part of the Jaeger Tract.

Jaeger Tract

Over the years the 17.4 acre property had been slated for high density development proposals. While these proposals have not materialized and the tract was downzoned, the city and WPCA are concerned that residential development now proposed could result in negative impacts on the park. Repeated requests for federal, county and state assistance to add this land to Greenbelt park have been rebuffed.

City council invited WPCA president Robert Crecco and board member Joe Haskell to participate in the worksession. Discussion focused on organizing a coalition of municipalities and environmental and other organizations to seek ways to buy and/or save the Jaeger tract and to appeal to the federal government for funding. Council directed staff to obtain additional information concerning a "Friends" agreement with the National Park Service as well as more details about the National Park Trust, a non-profit organization.

"Friends" Agreement

In his presentation at council's regular meeting on November 27, John Hale, superintendent of National Capital Parks-East, which includes Greenbelt Park, declared his interest in acquiring the Jaeger tract for the park. He noted that the property had moved up the list of priorities for acquisition, but the lack of funding was still a barrier.

Hale suggested that the city and the park enter into a "Friends" agreement that would formally establish the goal of obtaining the Jaeger tract and highlight the land's importance to both the city and the park. Councilmember Rodney Roberts said at the time that it needs to be made clear that the goal is to protect Greenbelt Park, not Westchester Park and that any development would be detrimental. There was general agreement that the city be the "front" organization.

National Park Trust

Councilmember Alan Turnbull pointed out that the "Friends" agreement would be limited, since the National Park Service cannot lobby on its own behalf. To address this problem, it was suggested that the National Park Trust could be the vehicle for getting organizations together under another umbrella.

Crecco reported that the Trust had shown some interest in the Jaeger tract issue. The Trust assists the National Park Service in preserving land in or adjoining a federal park by providing some permanent or partial funding for purchasing it. With such a purchase agreement would be a commitment for the Trust to be reimbursed over time.

Council agreed to hold a future informational meeting that would include briefings by representatives of the National Park Trust and the National Park Service.

Meanwhile the MNCPPC staff is studying the preliminary plan of subdivision for the 17.4 acre tract. According to Crecco, the plan shows 21 homes on half-acre lots that are expected to sell for $400,000 each. He and Haskell said that the owner is open to selling the property.

Second Tract

The status of and plans for a second remaining parcel of the Jaeger property, 3.7 acres, were also topics of discussion at the worksession. Located to the north of Westchester Park along Kenilworth Avenue, the tract is zoned R-30, which permits ten units per acre of garden-style apartments.

Crecco said that the developer of the property (AD&C Management Company) is working closely with association representatives and that he plans 37 units, mostly two-bedroom with a few three-bedroom units selling for approximately $40,000 each. Construction is expected to start soon.

Work Session

The City Council will hold a work session on the Jaeger Tract on Wednesday, January 17 at 8 p.m. in the Community Center. Representatives from Westchester Park Civic Association will attend. Presentations will be made by representatives of the National Park Service and the National Public Trust.

Astride a camel, Greenbelt's Cindy Frend checks out an ancient site in Jordan.

Cindy Frend and Camel Take a Walk in the Desert

by Nelda Young

She never thought she would ride a camel. But, Greenbelt's Cindy Frend did ride a camel while visiting Jordan in September.

A friend from work had studied archaeology in college and wanted to visit the Middle East. So she asked Frend if she would like to go with her. The rest is history.

They took a guided tour of Israel then flew to Jordan, where a Muslim tour guide and driver that they hired on the web met their plane. Getting to know these young men and their customs was a highlight of the trip. One evening they enjoyed dining in a neighboring town at a restaurant that was owned by a friend of the guide. In appreciation of their good stewardship, the ladies gave the Jordanians their phrase book when they departed.

The sites they visited are familiar to movie fans: Petra was a filming site of "Indiana Jones and the Raiders of the Lost Ark." In ancient times a city was carved out of two adjacent cliffs. Getting to the site and back to the hotel in modern times is an

by Dorothy Sucher

Long-time Greenbelter Lawrence Goldberg, 80, recently endowed an award in the College of Journalism at the University of Maryland in honor of his late wife, Lillie Goldberg, as well as of Hodding Carter, III — a unique combination of honorees.

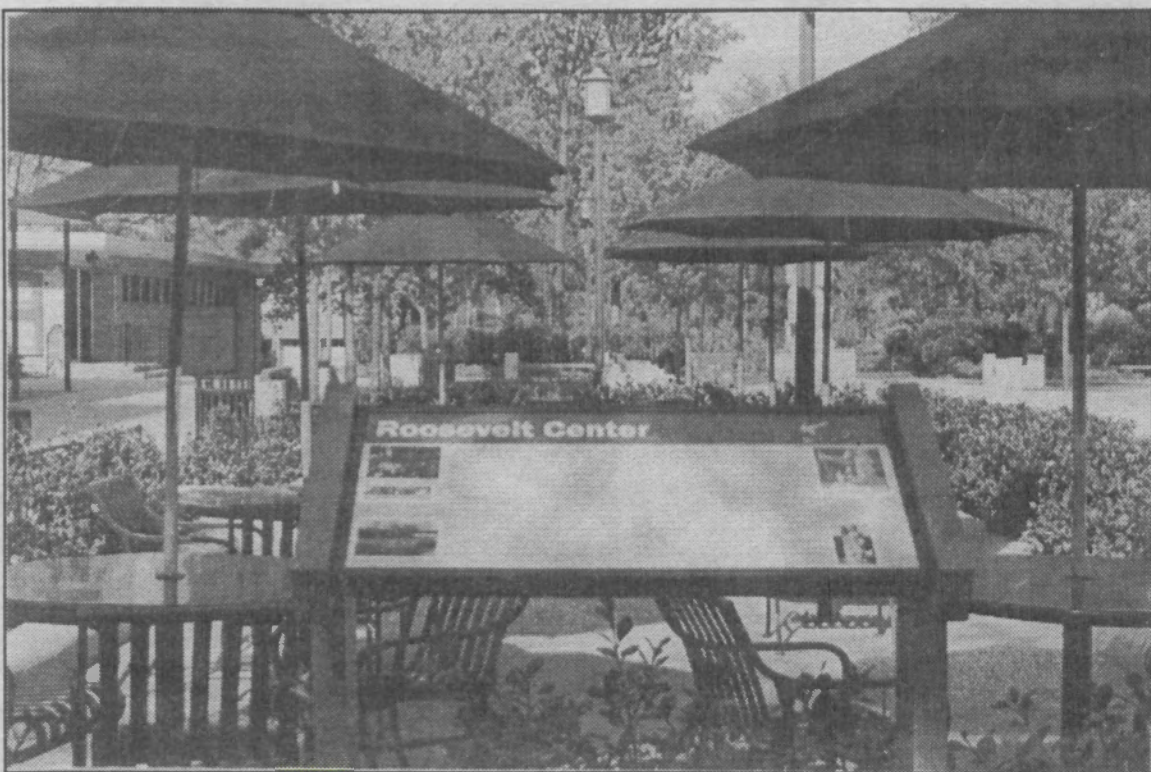

Goldberg, a civilian naval architect, retired from the Navy in 1976 and began enrolling in classes with his wife at the University of Maryland through the Golden I.D. Student Program. For many years the two took courses in the School of Public Affairs, as well as in the College of Journalism, several with Hodding Carter, III. They particularly relished Carter's tales of his personal experiences. Carter came from a newspaper family in Alabama, and the family paper took a strong stand in favor of civil rights at a time when the south was rabidly segregationist.

Lillie Goldberg died in 1997 and since then her husband had made several generous gifts in her memory to the university before establishing the present award. Although it is not unusual for family members to

Save Fireworks For the Fourth

I attended and enjoyed the last 1-1/2 hours of the Greenbelt New Year's Eve celebration. What a turnout! Many things must have been done right during previous years.

I did not attend the fireworks display because of the temperature, because of unwillingness to spend more than a couple of hours on the celebration, and because of disagreement that fireworks are appropriate for anything but the celebration of our nation's independence. It has always seemed most appropriate and moving to me to hear the explosions and think of the fighting and sacrifices and then to see the bright, beautiful displays of light as symbols of the peace we have gained because of the vision, determination and bravery of our ancestors.

As a veteran who has been spared the horrors of battle — perhaps because others were not spared — I do not take our freedom for granted, and am most inclined to suggest that the uniqueness of the Independence Day celebration be preserved for yesterday's veterans who defended, liberated, and helped to define our country — and for today's veterans who preserve our freedom and enable this same freedom for more and more other countries. Let's not take any part of the special independence celebration away from the soldiers who fought or from the families who sacrificed.

Otherwise, I really appreciate this yearly Greenbelt response to ambitious pricing of New Year's events and to the great worry that everyone feels about the well-being and safety of their loved ones on that night. Also, as organizer of the 1986 MADD parade entry with wrecker, ambulance and hearse that won best in parade and best float, I always find it most rewarding to find yet one more event where — believe it or not — there is a large turnout despite the absence of alcohol.

HEY!

We'd love to run your letter. But if you don't give us your name, address and phone number, and sign your letter, we can't.

If you recognize yourself in this, please resubmit your letter.

Thanks

My wife, Mary Mould, and I wish to thank all of you who have offered us support and concern since our house fire on January 3. We are all healthy and in relatively good spirits. Our daughter, Sarah (4), and our baby boy, Aidan, are handling it much better than we are.

We would like to publicly thank GHI for their untiring support and ongoing work on our home. Our gratitude also goes to the various fire departments, especially Greenbelt's, that responded so quickly. Finally, thanks to our parents, Willard and Carolyn Larkin, and Bill and Joan Mould, who, though they are probably duty-bound, have given us shelter until we can find a rental.

We can scarcely imagine going through a trial like this anywhere but Greenbelt. This community has been an indispensable comfort. I've spent all my 25 years loving this city, but have never appreciated it more than now. Thank you.

Your native son,
Phillip Larkin

Classes to Feature Island Dances

by Chris Cherry

Greenbelters slogging through the first real winter in years can cure cabin fever and take a vicarious tropical vacation by joining Wendy Emanuel's Caribbean Folk Dance classes. This program provides exposure to West Indian culture, including history, foods, festivals and artifacts, along with an invigorating dance exercise.

Classes begin Monday, January 15, and run for seven weeks. There is a class for children from 6 to 7 p.m. and a class for adults from 7 to 8 p.m. Kids 13 and older are welcome in the adult class. There is a fee. Registrations are being accepted now at the Community Center. Participants can also register on Sunday at Greenbelt Moves or on the first night of classes. Call 301-397-2208 for information.

Dance experience is not necessary. All that is needed is enthusiasm for exploring movement styles unique to West Indian traditions and Caribbean folklore. Tropical music and various world beats, including calypso, drums, salsa, and reggae, accompany the class.

Greenbelters can get a taste of the islands on Saturday, January 13 at 1 p.m. when Emanuel will present a free workshop and performance at the Community Center. The event, called Greenbelt Moves, will also showcase the talent of dancer and teacher Brooke Kidd, the executive director of Joe's Movement Emporium and World Arts Focus in Mt. Rainier. Greenbelt Moves is the beginning of a new collaboration between Joe's and the Greenbelt Recreation Department to provide Greenbelters with a greater array of movement classes and performances.

OBITUARIES

Herbert W. Cooper

Greenbelt pioneer Herbert W. Cooper, 62, died on Friday, January 5, 2001, at Montgomery General Hospital. After surviving surgery for lung cancer in mid-December, he returned to the hospital with a respiratory infection. At the time of his death, he resided in Calverton.

He was one month old in October 1938 when he moved to Greenbelt with his parents, the late Evelyn Cooper, who was vice-president of the Greenbelt Better Buyers and Don Cooper, who was editor of the Greenbelt Cooperator for 2 1/2 years and vice president of the Greenbelt Co-op, among other things. They lived first at 20B Crescent and then 6H Ridge Rd. He left for Germany with his family in 1947.

Mr. Cooper worked for Raytheon. He had played cello in the Montgomery Symphony Orchestra since 1953 and was one of the orchestra's oldest members. He was a member of Mensa.

Survivors include his wife Freia Noback Cooper; daughter Erika, who returned from Grenoble, France, for her father's funeral; son, Andy; father, Don Cooper and stepmother, Eileen Barnawell Cooper, Spotsylvania, VA; brother Kenneth Cooper and sister Janet Claggett.

Five Ways to Cut Home Energy Costs

Homeowners looking for ways to save money on their home energy bills this winter will find these five tips will make a difference this winter.

1. Check windows for heat loss. To prevent heat loss, install storm windows, avoid leaving them partially open, and consider a basic audit of the home.
2. Get the most out of the furnace. Keep furnace clean and make sure heating vents are not blocked. Make certain that large household items such as furniture are not blocking furnace vents.
3. Lower energy draw. Check the efficiency level of refrigerators. The Energy Guide provided by the manufacturer will tell how much energy the unit will use and the cost. Keep refrigerator parts clean.
4. Adjust thermostat regularly. During the winter months, if out of town for an extended period, set the thermostat to about 50 degrees. While at work, set the thermostat at 60 degrees.
5. Insulation helps. Insulate the home to provide savings. Damaged weather stripping on doors is a cause of heat loss. Check doors periodically for weather stripping, and replace any part of the door that is damaged or missing. Consider installing a high-insulating storm door.

GOLDBERG

establish funds in memory of loved ones, to jointly honor the loved one's teacher is highly unusual. Goldberg wished to memorialize the wonderful times he and Lillie had shared in Carter's classes, and he "put Carter's name first because he is the famous one."

Carter Was Touched

When Carter was contacted for input on the awards criteria, he responded to Goldberg in a touching personal letter. "I have never been so honored, so flattered, and so deeply touched as by your establishment of the award," he wrote. However, he insisted that the names in the award's title be reversed because, "Your gift and Lillie's memory are too important to take second place." He also pledged $10,000, matching Goldberg's gift, to establish the award. The fund supports an annual scholarship of $2,000 over the next 10 years to recruit outstanding students to the School of Journalism's public affairs reporting program.

Lillie Goldberg will be remembered by many Greenbelters for her involvement in civic and education affairs and Community Center activities. She served on The City's Advisory Committee on Education, participated with her husband in the "Moving Ahead" tutoring program for teens at Springhill Lake, and belonged to the Gray Panthers and other local organizations. Before retiring in 1984, she was one of the country's first remedial reading teachers and initiated paperback libraries in the schools in which she worked.

The Prince George's County Planning Board has approved with conditions the preliminary plan of subdivision for the development. "In reviewing the impact, we couldn't find anything to bring up with MNCPPC and the staff there indicated that this wasn't heavy density," Crecco told the council.

In response, Greenbelt City Councilmember Rodney Roberts said, "As far as I'm concerned, one building there is too many."

At a later point in the meeting, he stated, "The reason I'm interested (in saving the parcel) is that I want to protect the park...Any development there is going to have a bad impact."

Problems concerning access to the site during construction were discussed. Russell Shipley, attorney for the developer, had told WPCA representatives several months ago that he approached the State Highway Administration to see if it would be feasible to receive access from Kenilworth Avenue during the construction period. A special application would have to be made for such access but to date, it has not been done.

At the meeting Councilmember Thomas White noted that one of the city's conditions in acceding to the county Planning Board's preliminary plan was that the developer not disturb the wetland buffer along Kenilworth Avenue. Crecco said that the developer has to replace vegetation if any is destroyed. Mayor Judith Davis observed that the city still needs to obtain a detailed site plan from the county Planning Board.

Public Hearing on Youth Safety and a Proposed Curfew Law

Monday, January 22, 2001, at 8 p.m.
Municipal Building

As part of its regular meeting on January 22, the Greenbelt City Council will hold a Public Hearing for the purpose of soliciting public opinion on youth safety and a proposed juvenile curfew law that has been drafted by the Public Safety Advisory Committee.

Curfew laws have been passed in Prince George's County and in Laurel, Hyattsville, and the District of Columbia. The proposed Greenbelt law would require that youth under 18 not be in public places from 10 p.m. - 5 a.m. on week nights and 11:59 p.m. - 5 a.m. on weekends. Exemptions would be made for employment, organized events, emergencies, and other reasonable needs.

Curfew laws are intended not only to reduce juvenile crime and violence but also to protect juveniles from harm. The City Council is interested in hearing the opinions of citizens on the proposed law and on the broader issues of youth safety and community safety in Greenbelt.

If special accommodations are required to make this meeting accessible to any disabled person, please call 301-474-8000 or 301-474-2046 (TDD) to request such accommodations as soon as possible and no later than Monday, January 22, 2001 at 10:00 a.m.

CINDY FREND

From her hotel Frend took a 15-minute horse ride, then walked 45 minutes on a wide sandy and cobblestone path to the clearing to see the historic carved buildings. To get up and out, they rode a camel and then a donkey. Frend is the one on camel-back in the picture.

Another day they visited Wadi Rum, where "Lawrence of Arabia" was photographed. Their guide pointed out the niches carved from the stone which held the cameras.

Frend said, the food on the trip was a disappointment. They quickly tired of hummus, falafel, swarma (a gyro made with turkey) which was served with little bowls of vegetables. Before their trip ended Frend's friend bemoaned, I'd kill for a hamburger.

They appreciated the familiar American food they ate at a Pizza Hut. However, they did not appreciate having to wait till all male customers were served before receiving their food.

Fortunately, the unrest in Israel did not escalate until after they departed for Jordan.

Pitkin and Weidenfeld Speak on Telework

Representatives from cities and counties throughout the Washington region announced new initiatives to heighten awareness and accelerate implementation of teleworking programs. The announcements came at the Washington Area Conference on Telework, presented by the Metropolitan Washington Council of Governments (COG) in association with Fairfax County and the International Telework Association and Council.

Because the Washington Metropolitan area has the second worst traffic congestion in the U.S., and is faced with very serious air quality issues, COG recently set a goal of 20% of the region's workforce by teleworking from home, at least once a week, by 2005. At that participation level, each weekday 185,000 people would work from home, 70,000 fewer vehicles would be on the road during the rush hour, 118,000 gallons of gas would be saved and automobile emissions would be reduced by 1.2 tons.

State Delegate Joan B. Pitkin (D-23rd District) and Gil Weidenfeld, former mayor of Greenbelt, now Telework coordinator for the Maryland Department of Transportation were the only Maryland officials to speak.

Delegate Pitkin spoke about her successful legislation which created a statewide Telework Program for Maryland's 63,000 person state workforce. Her legislation, the first of its kind nationally, sets a goal of 10% participation across state agencies by 2002. Weidenfeld manages the successful Telework Partnership with Employers Grant Program which provides free professional consulting and training services to employers in local government and the private sector to assist in the establishment of successful telework programs, particularly as a good recruiting and retention tool. Twenty five employers have so far signed contracts under the program. Both Pitkin and Weidenfeld received the International Telework Association and Council's Telework Leadership awards for their initiatives.

Job Corps Begins New Campaign

The Job Corps has launched a recruitment campaign to attract more students to its newly enhanced training and education program for young people between the ages of 16 and 24.

The new program elements are designed to better prepare students for the workplace. Students work with counselors to develop personalized career plans to guide them through their training toward meaningful careers rather than entry-level dead-end jobs. Necessary computer skills, resume writing, employability skills and interview skills are taught in the first few weeks of the program.

In addition, counselors provide support to graduates for one year after their first job placement as they adjust to independent living. The support will include additional job placement if necessary and guidance to include an array of support services in the community to encourage and help graduates gain independent living.

The Job Corps offers students a variety of training opportunities in more than 30 career areas such as carpentry, culinary arts and health occupations. Students can also receive their GED or high school diploma. If students qualify, most centers offer advanced training at a local technical school or community college.

A primarily residential program funded by the Department of Labor, the Job Corps provides room and board, meals and medical care at no cost to students. Students enrolled in the program receive a biweekly living allowance. A portion of the biweekly living allowance up to $15 can be set aside for dependent support. The amount selected will be matched five times by the Department of Labor.

Job Corps Region II, headquartered in Philadelphia, administers 19 training centers and oversees outreach and career development activities for students in Delaware, the District of Columbia, Kentucky, Maryland, Pennsylvania, Virginia, and West Virginia. Depending on career interest, Job Corps applicants usually enroll in the center closest to their homes.

For more information about joining the Job Corps, call 800-733-JOBS or visit their web site at: www.jobcorpsregion2.com.

The cast of GAC's "Fools"

Neil Simon Comedy at Arts Center

Neil Simon's "Fools" is providing cast and crew with giggles, guffaws and hoots of laughter as they rehearse the comedy that opens Friday night at the Greenbelt Arts Center (GAC). The play deals with a town under a 200-year-old curse that has turned everyone into truly foolish folks. Director Keith Brown says the plot is taken from an old European story and that Simon has added a number of twists and turns.

Among Greenbelters in the cast are Deborah Cohen, Tim Whitehall and Rachel Zinkin, all familiar faces to local audiences.

Also known from previous productions are Rob Perkins, Jeff Landou, Marie Bowles and Dan Lavanga. New to GAC are Fran Calhoun, Sam DePriest and Dan Bravmann.

The play is entirely suitable for family audiences. ### Greenbelt Grab Bag

by Punchin' Judy

On occasion this reporter has been accused of exaggeration in her stories. I plead guilty just a teeny-weeny bit. I don't make up my stories out of whole cloth, just an incidental thread or two might come out of my imagination. However, the following recital is absolutely true, honestly, I will testify on a stack of News Reviews, and I have witnesses.

One morning, a few months ago, I woke up to a ringing accompanied by the sound of TOCK-TICK. Sleepily I glanced at my alarm clock while shutting it off. It said 4:30. This was no time for me to be up, yet, looking out the window I could see that it was full daylight. Something was wrong with the world. Again I looked at the clock and discovered it was running backward! What did it mean - was my time running out?

I changed the batteries, but the hands continued merrily on their counter-clockwise course. A relative decided it meant I was getting younger, thanks to the vitamins he had recommended. Was it "temporal" insanity on my part? No, it was no delusion, others saw the same phenomenon, but no one could explain it. I asked a colleague at work. He's an editor so supposedly he's smart though he has a tendency to be abusively punny. He's even been on Jeopardy but I don't hold that against him. He gave me a long explanation about gears. My intellect has never encompassed gears (or cogs - are they the same?). The only gear that has interested me is actor

For more information, call the Community Center at 301-397-2208.

Richard, and he spells it GERE. After my editor friend finished his erudite explanation, he assured me that time is precious but tock is cheap. I left in a timely hurry.

I placed the clock on a shelf and invested in another alarm. Once in a while I checked on my backward timepiece; there was no change. No change until New Year's eve, when I looked up and something was different. The clock was running clockwise! I set it to the correct time and it has been working fine ever since.

Admittedly, I feel somewhat spooked. Is it an omen? What is the meaning of this wrinkle in time? Is there a chronologist in the house?

HELP!

Poet Lori Tsang Presents an "Artful Afternoon"

by Virginia Beauchamp

The small audience that gathered on Sunday, January 7 in the lobby area of the Community Center to hear poet Lori Tsang and bassist B.T. Richardson found themselves listeners at a mesmerizing performance. Tsang, who was born in Jamaica of a long line of Chinese wanderers, showed herself adept at catching the nuances of various American dialects and sensibilities. Her delivery of these differing cadences and moods was electrifying.

One set of poems was her response to the variety of ethnic backgrounds of her Washington neighborhood near Catholic University. Another set represented the changing voices of Malcolm X as his persona evolved with age and experience. Another impressive poem, stimulated by Tsang's visit to Puerto Rico, evoked the warmth and magic of the Caribbean, where her own life began.

Throughout these recitations, Richardson's evocative blues strumming formed a moving and empathic background to Tsang's verse. A tall African-American next to Tsang with her delicate frame, the two of them visually represented the neighborly diversity that her poems celebrated.

Tsang said that her own birth and development as a poet began through listening to poetry slam performances. At first she was scared and shy, she said; but, eventually through repeated efforts, she developed assurance. She had just returned from performing in Toronto, where she attended a conference on the history of the Chinese population group from which she was descended - a people who had left China for Indonesia and then later dispersed to other regions, including a component who ended up in Jamaica.

Richardson, who has performed all over the country, particularly enjoys the challenge of ensemble work requiring close listening to one's fellow performers. He certainly demonstrated that skill in his work with Tsang.

Their presentation was one element of what was called an Artful Afternoon. It was sponsored by the city's Recreation Department and also included a reception and collage workshop in conjunction with an exhibit of visual artist Marilyn Banner.

The Artful Afternoon programs will be presented at the Community Center on the first Sunday of the month, noon to 5 p.m. With quality like this, they deserve to be better attended.
